September 2021

Full Circle

Infinite Circle

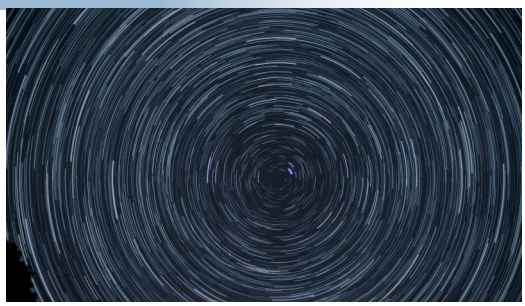

Photo by Markus Winkler on Unsplash

No one can do everything.

I mention it in the blog article linked below and please indulge this idea; saying yes can lead to a great outcome. Saying yes all the time, indiscriminately, can be exhausting and counterproductive.

What I wish for you is adventure, learning experiences, and memories that stay with you. Take a chance, go all in.

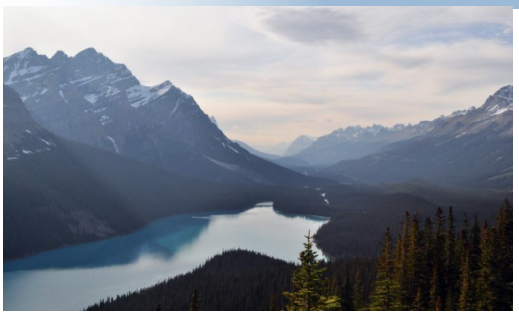
Go Forth and Be Awesome

Adventure or Abyss?

Have you ever been "voluntold" to do something?

It can feel weird to be out of control when you've been committed to an unknown task. We can go kicking and screaming or we can take a deep breath and go in with our best selves. We get to choose.

The most recent article, "The Steamboad Risk and Black Mountain Reward" addresses, frankly, just doing the thing (but not every thing): 360-Clarity.com/blog



Something Extra

Photo by Clay Banks on Unsplash

Trust your gut.

For some things. Hiring is not one of them. We like to think our highly-tuned skills of intuition and reading body language will lead us to the absolute best candidate to hire for a position. Turns out, data does this much better than our digestive tract.

Hiring Isn't Rocket Science: Why the Most Boring Strategy is the Best: click here.

360 Clarity

Please forward this to whomever you like!

If you'd like to unsubscribe, please let me know.