What if you accepted positive feedback?

Really. No, "Thanks, but..." or, "I'm sure someone else is better at..." Just accept it. Maybe not blindly, but graciously.

Then, maybe accept not just their feedback, but that it is objectively accurate.

The last Something Extra was about scarcity. Is empathy a scarce resource? Does giving empathy toward someone reduce empathy toward the giver?

This brief review discusses these questions. Additionally, consider your empathic tendencies. If you give empathy, do you expect empathy in return?
